

A Smelly Experience...

"Another literature evangelist... suffered an incredible indignity. A Muslim lady of the house doused him with the contents of a chamber-pot. That would seem to be enough to dampen the spirits of any ordinary literature evangelist. But not this brother's. He went around to the back door to try again, pretending that he thought it was another house.

"Of course, the same lady appeared; but undaunted, the literature evangelist said, 'Lady, I hope you don't treat me like that other lady over there did!' After an awkward silence, she laughed, and incredibly he found it possible to laugh also. She brought him a large Turkish towel and helped him clean himself up as best he could. Then she bought a health book.

"Weeks later, he called again and made friends with her husband. This time the couple bought religious books, and today twelve members of that family are Seventh-day Adventist Christians."

Adventure Unlimited, by Russell C. Thomas, pg. 7